ALASKAN TELEGRAPH NEARING COMPLETION

Before Year Is Ended It Will Be Connected With the United States.

TERRITORY'S GREAT FUTURE.

Signal Corps, Says New Legislation Is All That Is Necessary.

The Republic Bureau, 18th St. and Pennsylvania Ave. Washington, Aug. 23.-Before the present year has ended Alaska will be connected with the United States by wire, and before the expiration of two weeks many hundred miles of telegraphic communication will have been established between remote towns of that Territory and the coast cities.

This is the statement of General Greely, Chief of the Signal Corps of the army, who has just returned from a visit to Alaska for the purpose of inspecting and directing the operations under progress in the line operations and line operations under progress in the line operations under progress in the line operations and line operations and line operations and line operations under progress in the line operation operations and line operations and line operations and line operations under progress in the line operations and line operations and line operations under progress in the line operations under progress in the line operations and line operations under progress in the line operations and line operations under progress in the line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations are also better the line operations are also better the line operations and line operations are also better the line operations are also b

Besides talking on telegraphic matters, General Greely to-day gave some of his impressions of Alaska, which are interesting. He said:

"I believe that the great need of Alaska is legislation regarding lands, timber and possibly the fishing industry. Strange as it may seem, there is no way by which even a discharged soldier can obtain title to It may seem, there is no way by which even a discharged soldier can obtain title to a homestead in Alaska. It is true that the homestead laws of the United States apply to that, Territory, but inasmuch as such laws have no effect except on what are known as certified lands, it is practically of the will ask for letters of administration on the estate, and for that reason we intend to take up our residence in San Francisco. no effect, because there are no certified to take up our residence in San Francisco.

"From reports from the members of the Signal Corps, as well as from other reliable information gathered while on my trip. I am impressed with the belief that Alaska has a great agricultural future before her. In traveling west I passed through large areas in Northern Canada, which were formerly considered to be absolutely worthless lands, but which are now producing crops of the value of millions of dollars annually, as well as affording grazing lands for cattle by the tens of thousands.

"There is now in view a settlement of Finns on the Kenai Peninsula, from which great agricultural developments are expected. In this connection it may be mentioned that the summers are warm, the land is fertile, and the possibility of raising certain cereals is unequaled anywhere. Vegetables of every variety grow in the Copper River Valley, and grass is hardy. I saw many scress in this section where the grass stood from four to six feet in height. This affortis most excellent grazing as well as an opportunity for hay making for the wintering of stock.

"There is a strong feeling in the territory against the laws which tax all trades and professions and turns this money into the Treasury of the United States. Perhaps Alaska is the only place in the United States where the national Government requires even a bootblack to pay a tax for the privilege of conducting his business, and what is true of the bootblack is also true of every other craft or profession. The people there believe that the fees arising from this tax should be devoted partly toward the education of the people of the Territory. The population is rapidly increasing.

Viewed as a Mineral Camp.

"The mistake seems to have been that Alaska has been viewed only as a great mining camp in the past. As a rule, however, I believe that Alaska is a country only for rich men. While the gold deposits are exceedingly rich, they require immense capital to develop and work them. This working can be done only by the most improved machinery. Of course there are parts of Alaska which are barren and unprofitable, but in this enormous region there are areas of the size of many ef our smaller States, which in the not distant future will be inhabited with a dense population.

"It is anticipated that within the next week or two Valdez, Alaska, will be in telegraphic communication with the outside world. This line runs from Dawson through Egbert, as a military wire, and is about 450 miles long. There is now in optraction in the territory about 800 miles of wire in the central and lower Yukon valley. This will be connected with the Valdez system, which will bring the lower Yukon, St. Michaels and Nome within daily reach of the rest of the world."
